About The River Otter Journal

The River Otter Journal is a historical publication (Fall of 1991 through the Winter of 2013) of the former River Otter Alliance (ROA). We should all thank the Board of Directors and editors of the ROA for all their hard work and dedication to the creation and publishing of The River Otter Journal (ROJ) for so many years. In addition we should appreciate and support the proprietary interest the Board of Directors and Editors has in the historical publication of The River Otter Journal.

A level of stability and permanence must be maintained for the historical publications of the Journal in support of the River Otter Alliance Board of Directors' and editors proprietary interest in these historical publications. To accomplish this task a professional publication needed to commit to maintain these historical issues into perpetuity as a historical archive and provide continued and free access to these issues. The IUCN/Otter Specialist Group (OSG) website has made this commitment. All the historical issues of the ROJ needed to be compiled as an archive. A number of otter scientists and ROA board members provided hard and digital copies of the issues to Victor L. Camp who compiled the issues into an archive for posting on the IUCN/OSG website.

To access the historical archive through the River Otters of South Florida website and on the internet use the following link: <https://riverotterjournal.org>.
